Considerable discussion has arisen lately as to the advisability of the Yaei Union continuing in its present state. Its original pooley, which has been closely adhered to up to this year, was to control all the debating interests of the university. This object has of late been lost sight of, owing to the great increase in the number of social debating clinks. These clubs have taken practically all the interest away from the Union so that the debates of that organization have steadily declined in interest. One of the remedies suggested is that of making the Union as or of council, composed of men who are considered the most accomplished debaters in the social organizations, thus making an election to the Union a mark of distinction. Under this arrangement, of course, the whole debating pooley of the university could still continue in the hands of this organization.
